About Me

I'm a graphic designer currently focused on creative leadership, branding, and marketing. My experience and love of design go all the way back to the 90's (not to date myself). Throughout my career I have worked in both print and digital, in big teams, as well as on my own. My personal philosophy is that the more we can know about what we are designing and why, then we will create better designs. Being naturally curious about everything makes us better designers, and better people.
